

With PathWays for Aging, you get support your way – to live life your way.

Research shows that most of Indiana's older Hoosiers want to age at home. Or they want to age independently in their communities. The Indiana Family and Social Services Administration will launch a new program in July 2024 to help make this happen. The program is called PathWays for Aging. And it's for Hoosiers aged 60 and over who receive Medicaid (or both Medicaid and Medicare) benefits.

With PathWays, older Hoosiers can pick a health plan. And that plan will help them to get high-quality services and support they need to live as independently as possible. The program will not change or expand Medicaid benefits. Hoosiers in the program may qualify for support like transportation to their doctor's office. Or they may qualify for help in making meals. Or they may qualify for home-health visits, or going to an adult day center. There are many other services and support available. It all depends on what the individual is qualified to receive. Each enrolled Hoosier will have a health plan care coordinator to help them get all their benefits. They will have a service coordinator, if they qualify for additional support.
